A late 19th century Jaques 'In Statu Quo' patent mahogany cased travelling chess set, purportedly formerly owned by Henry George Liddell and used by Lewis Carroll, the interior with turned and carved bone playing pieces (one pawn missing), length of board 32cm, within its original dark green leather outer case. Note: this lot comes with an accompanying letter of provenance.

Estimate: £100 - £200

Condition Report

2521. All remaining pieces are original and have their brass pins, albeit, a few are slightly bent. One knight has a slight chip to its face and one pawn has a repaired crack across its base. The locking mechanism doesn't seem to be in working order.
