LOT 4517

A mid to late 19th century double-barrelled percussion shotgun by W. Howell, London, with Damascus steel barrels, barrel length 69.5cm, foliate locks and hammers and scrolling steel trigger guard, full-stocked with chequered grip and ebonized ramrod with brass tip. Provenance: the property of a Hampshire private collector.

Estimate: £80 - £120

Condition Report

4517. Overall an honest untouched gun, Overall marks and bruising, small slither of wood lacking below barrels on forestock. Steelwork uncleaned with nice patina, old evidence of rust but very light. Nipples are present but one looks misaligned or poorly fitted, they both look more recent additions. Both hammers full and half cock. Repair to ramrod, appears to have been cracked and plate repaired with a sleeve of brass. Cannot provide a condition report on the barrels.
