LOT 1003

A Tibetan carved human bone apron ornament, probably 16th century, carved in relief with a tantric deity below a foliate scroll surmount, above a mask terminal, length 13.5cm (chip to terminal). Note: for a similarly carved example, see The Ashmolean Museum, Oxford.

Provenance: the Alain Presencer Collection.

Estimate: £200 - £300

Condition Report

1003. Chip to one end, otherwise in good condition with good crisp carving. A bit dusty and dirty, so likely to benefit from a clean.
