LOT 1022

A Chinese hardwood lid or cover, Qing dynasty, possibly zitan wood, of domed circular form with finely carved radiating petal decoration, beneath a turned knob finial, diameter 14.4cm, together with a collection of nineteen wood stands, some with carved and pierced aprons, including two square stands, width 11.2cm.

Estimate: £100 - £150

Condition Report

1022. The cover is in good condition with no significant damage or repairs, typical light surface scratches and scuffs, a little dusty and would benefit from a clean.

Small rectangular stand - part of scroll broken to one end and part to scroll broken and re-glued to the other end.

Large circular stand - this is just the top section from a larger stand and also has a split.

One of the small stands with carved and pierced apron - chip to rim.

Two other medium sized stands are just top sections from larger stands.

Otherwise all other stands in generally good condition with typical light surface wear and scratches but no significant damage.
