LOT 1521

A large gilt metal mounted Doulton Lambeth stoneware oil lamp (converted to electricity), dated 1881, decorated by Edith Lupton, monogrammed, incised with three large stylized foliate panels each centred by a relief flowerhead against a 'Y' diaper ground, flanked by geometric flowerhead panels and a brown glazed ground of scrolling foliage, the gilt metal base with shell panels above a laurel band and four acanthus topped scroll feet, the shoulders with a gilt metal rim of shells and scrolls, incised and impressed marks to base, height to top of fitting 57.5cm.

Estimate: £300 - £500

Condition Report

In good condition overall with no cracks, chips or restoration.

The oil reservoir or font is fixed into position with the metal mounts so we cannot remove it, but I assume it has been drilled by the nature of the electric conversion with the cable going through the centre of the lamp at the top and coming out through the centre of the base.

The mounts have some wear to them commensurate with age and handling.
