LOT 1450

An English delft Tulip charger with blue dash rim, circa 1700, London or Bristol, painted in blue, green, yellow and red with three tulip flowers, carnations, spiral buds and leaves in a fan like arrangement emanating from a low mound, against a white ground, the rim with a blue and a yellow line beneath blue dashes, the underside with greyish tin glaze on a white slip ground, unmarked, diameter 34.8cm (cracked). Note: A similar example is illustrated by Michael Archer, Delftware The Tin-Glazed Earthenware of the British Isles, p.92, A.37.

Estimate: £700 - £1,000

Condition Report

Long crack to rim at 9 o'clock running virtually horizontally into and just across the middle of the dish. At some point it looks as though someone has tried to stabilise this crack with a clear painted coating along its length - this clear coating is and has flaked.

Please see the images on our website using the zoom function. There are other smaller quite indistinct hairlines to the rim edge, nothing terrible.

Typical fritting to rim edge circumference.

Small chip to underside rim edge approx 2cm long.

Some minor chipping and frits to footrim, nothing untoward.
